

Is Part-Time Work Right for You?

Part-time work is a great way to supplement your workflow and work with multiple teams at the same time. An attorney can build new relationships, gain exposure to how different companies or law firms operate, and potentially work on new matters that a full-time role might not offer.

How this approach might help your career plan will vary based on your specific goal but building your network and honing new legal skills can certainly lead to new opportunities down the road—whether that’s another part-time or a full-time role or being considered for a permanent role when the client has an opening.

ARE YOU:

Trying to build up expertise in a new area or an area that you are familiar with but have not done recently/enough of?

Looking to increase your earning potential?

Building a practice of your own?

Returning to practice after taking time away?

Looking to take a step back in responsibilities but still want to stay active and practice?

Only interested in working a few hours a week to fit your current circumstances?

If you answered yes to any of these,
then part-time work may be right for you.
